CONSTANTINOPLE, March 14.

"THE usual levity of the Turk, which has continued with very little interruption from the latter end of December, till the third instant, joined to a total suspension of the plague for upwards of 50 days, induced a hope that this city and neighbourhood were at length freed from the contagion. But it is now apparent that the open mild weather which commenced the 3d instant, though it lasted only till the 10th, has reproduced that malady, no less than nine verified accidents of the plague having been happened in the Greek village of St. Dimitri, very near Pera; so that there is great reason to apprehend that the contagion will again spread on the return of warm weather.

BERLIN, April 21.

By the last accounts from Vienna the emperor purposes returning through Upper Hungaria, and will not, it is said, be absent above six weeks. Not far from Belgrade there will be a small corps of observation stationed, as war between Russia and the Porte is thought to be absolutely determined upon, and will, it is reported, be publicly declared at Constantinople in ten days; notwithstanding this the empress still purposes being crowned at Cherson.

LONDON, April 20.

Extract of a letter from Algiers, March 18.

"The following account cannot fail of being entertaining to you, as it serves to shew the disposition of the dey in its true light.——On the 29th of January the St. Gertrude, a Spanish frigate, arrived here, commanded by the chevalier Fonguion; a brig from Carthagena arrived immediately after on board of which was the compte D'Espilly, accompanied by the Spanish consul Herrera, the vice consul Colonel Don Juan Thomas, and the chevalier de Vanderset, the two latter came on the business of negotiating a peace for the courts of Naples and Lisbon.

"The Spanish consul came on shore on the 30th, and was received with some degree of politeness. On the 2d of February was brought on shore the remaining part of the money promised by the court of Spain, as the price of peace, consisting of four hundred and ninety thousand pieces of eight. With this the dey was not satisfied, and expressed his anger to the consul, asking why the king of Spain had not sent the 5,000,000 pieces promised? The consul answered, that the ship Minho had brought 700,000 pieces, which with the 490,000 now brought, made the promised sum of one million, reckoning 90,000 pieces of eight for every 100,000 sequins, as agreed upon by the articles of peace. The dey flew into a violent passion on hearing this, and insisted upon the other 10,000 pieces, otherwise he would arrest the frigate, the brig, and all the crew. But on the consul's promising to pay the whole, he became more calm, and seemed content.

"On the 24th the Spanish commander, accompanied by the other officers and compte D'Espilly, came to have their audience of leave from the dey. The compte was grossly abused by the dey who called him vagabond, thief, impostor, &c. and lest any part of this language should be lost upon him, ordered the interpreter to translate them literally to him. The dey also added, "Give back the letter which I entrusted you with to the king of Spain; deliver it to the consul, whom I shall send to him; and remain you here till you have paid the money to those whom you have robbed."—and after a moment's silence, cried out in a vehement tone, "Go to hell (va t' en au diable)" and then turning to the commander of the frigate and the Spanish consul, he ordered them to give to their king a faithful account of this scene, adding, that he would himself write to his catholic majesty. On the 25th early in the morning, the dey sent a Chaoux-Maure to the compte D'Espilly, to order him to leave the town directly, and repeat to him the language of the preceding day. Scarcely was the compte on board, when the dey sent again a messenger to the consul to tell him that he must give security for the payment of the compte D'Espilly's debts, otherwise he would have him yoked to the plough, and made to work with a chain about his feet; the consul then promised to pay those debts, which are, in fact the sums of money which the compte had promised to the ministers of the dey's court, in order to procure their assistance in negotiating a peace.

"It is certain that the compte did not make good all his large promises; and as the consul sent an account of the whole affair to the court of Spain, the compte is gone to Madrid to defend himself, and clear up his conduct. There is no doubt that he will be justified, as the avarice of the Barbarians is well known."

May 6. A letter from Algiers, dated February 20, says, "The plague, which has so long defolated this place and its environs, has at last disappeared, but the small-pox rages in its stead with almost equal violence, that disorder having, in the course of a few months, carried off 35,000 persons. The dey has sent a dragoman to Constantinople to make the usual presents to the divan, and to renew the treaty with the grand signior."

Letters from Bucharest, in Wallachia, say there was a violent shock of an earthquake felt at that place on the 16th of March last.

A letter from Hanover says, that as soon as the order was issued out by the regency, for filling up the vacancies in the several regiments, a number of young fellows, who were out of employment, entered into the service, and are now learning their exercise. Most of them, the letter says, are upwards of six feet high.

Extract of a letter from Venice, March 2.

"The naval armament which has been for some time in preparation by order of the senate, it is now well known, is to join a Spanish fleet, for the bombardment of Tetuan, in order to take some revenge for the behaviour of the Morisco cruisers against the vessels belonging to this republic, which they have lately captured in every part of the Mediterranean, &c. by which the merchants have sustained very heavy losses. This conduct of the Moors is equally rapacious and unexpected, as presents to a very large amount have been sent from the state to the emperor of Morocco, who accepted of them, and promised that proper orders should be given to all his cruisers to pay the necessary attention to all ships carrying the Venetian flag."

A merchant at Pool has received a letter from St. John's, in Newfoundland, that upon the 20th of March they had a violent hurricane there which had done considerable damage to the stages, buildings, &c. and that the Orphee, a French man of war of 64 guns, was lost on the banks, but all the crew except two men got on shore, and procured a vessel at St. John's to carry them home, which is supposed to be lost, as she has not been heard of.

Letters from Ostend mention, that three ships of large burthen are now fitting out there, by the emperor's order, for trading to different parts of America.

Extract of a letter from on board the Dashwood packet boat, dated Falmouth, April 28.

"We are just arrived here from the Leeward Islands, after a passage of 38 days of blowing weather as ever I met with at this time of the year, and many vessels have felt the bad effects of it, for off the rocks of Scilly we saw several pieces of wrecks and dead bodies floating about, and soon after the hull of a large ship, foreign built, driving before the wind, which we with great difficulty kept clear of. Every thing is in a flourishing state in our island, and the greatest harmony exists among the people; further I can assure you, that you will have sugars very cheap."

A letter from St. Kitts, dated March 20, says, "All the ships that have arrived here this season have full cargoes, for never had we greater plenty of sugar than the last crop, and we have enough left to load another fleet. We have received melancholy accounts from several of the French islands, particularly from Guadaloupe and Martinico, both which have suffered greatly by hurricanes, and other islands by pestilential disorders, which have carried off a number of their negroes; but, thank God, we are free of those calamities, and, on the contrary, enjoy health, and plenty of every necessary of life."

The barbarians still continue their depredations on the coasts of Italy: Letters from Rome assert, that three Algerine frigates had landed a number of men on the ecclesiastical territories, and after plundering and destroying a whole village, had carried of several of the unfortunate inhabitants. In consequence of this his holiness had issued orders for the equipment of some stout ships, to protect his subjects from the attacks of those lawless depredators; and intends uniting his force to that of the other christain powers, who are now arming for the purpose of chastising their insolence.

The mails from Holland and Flanders, which arrived yesterday, brought the following letter from Banat of Temeswar, dated April 4:—If private letters from Constantinople may be believed, the Russian ambassador is guarded there at sight by a corps of janizaries, and dares no longer quit his palace. It is said that at the intercession of the other ministers, the term of forty days has been granted to him, in which he is to give a categorical answer on the part of his sovereign, to the last representations made by the Porte; and in case the answer should not be conformable to the desires of his highness, he may expect to be shut up in the castle of the seven towers, and open war will be inevitable. The people of Constantinople breathe nothing but vengeance. A few days since they sacrificed to their fury two Russian soldiers.

BOSTON, June 29.

We are informed, by a gentleman of this town, who left Lake Champlain the 18th instant, that the British have fitted out the ship Maria, of 20 guns, in order to cruise on that Lake; that she was three miles from the line, within our territories, when he came from thence; that she had taken one vessel (said to be on the smuggling business) belonging to the United States; and that the British were also fitting out a gun boat, which was to accompany the Maria, in cruising on the Lake. This ship, it is said, was taken from us during the late war.

We are also informed, by the same gentleman, that lord Dorchester, governor of Quebec, lately issued a proclamation, containing orders for putting the militia of that province on the best establishment possible; and that six regiments were certainly coming from England, said to be a relief for the troops now stationed at the different posts in Canada.

The regulation of the militia of Vermont has been lately undertaken, and it is said, will soon be upon a very respectable footing.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Berkshire county, dated June 20, 1787.

"Depredations on the property and persons of those who unfortunately have been friends to government in these counties are nightly committed. We have frequent instances of persons being violently attacked and beaten on the roads while they are journeying in a peaceable manner; in short, we are exposed to all the evils of a depredatory civil war. The insurgents plume themselves on having many friends in the government—and indeed those who are opposed to them think they have every thing to fear.—God grant that these fears may not be realized."

LANSINGBOROUGH, June 25.

A gentleman who passed through town last Saturday, from Egremont, informs, that on the 18th instant, a number of the insurgents among whom were Adams and Dunham, paid a visit to a Mr. Kellogg, of that place, who was saluted by Dunham with the breech of a gun, then robbed of every thing valuable in his house, even to the shirt on his back. Mr. Kellogg would probably have received more abuse, had he not, in the confusion of plundering the house, made his escape at a back door. The ruffians then proceeded to the house of E. Hopkins, Esq; into which they discharged five balls that passed through the curtains of the bed in the room where they supposed he lodged; but their usual cowardice prevented their entering the house, as they knew Mr. Hopkins to be armed, and concluded he would oppose them.

Their next attack was upon the defenceless house of the rev. Eliphalet Steele, who they robbed of about forty pounds worth of provisions and cloathing; they also took from the rev. Mr. Alexander, (who happened that night to be at Mr. Steele's) his hat, great-coat, and watch. They then fled over the line to this state, where it is supposed they will endeavour to continue till their ill gotten gains are consumed, when, it is supposed, they will again visit the inhabitants of Berkshire.

We are informed, by the same gentleman, that a number of the principal inhabitants of Berkshire have signed a subscription-paper, offering a reward of one hundred dollars for either Dunham or Adams, double the sum for both, and half the said sum for either of their accomplices in the above-mentioned robberies.——We presume that a bare representation of the facts will be sufficient to induce every honest man to exert himself in apprehending such nefarious villains.

WILMINGTON, (Delaware) July 4.

Extract of a letter from a correspondent in St. Eustatius, dated June 7, 1787.

"I wrote a few days since, by the way of Philadelphia, noting the effects likely to take place in consequence of a late prohibition of all communication with the English Islands; it is actually the case, and days are advertised in each Island when it shall commence. Some are allowed 3 days, some more, to look round. St. Chriſtopher's, it is ſaid this morning, has 30 days to get a ſupply, and it is impoſſible for us to tell the conſequences, but if the ſtates ſubmit tamely to it, they are certainly ableto do the whole, and our veſſels may immediately be deſtroyed.—There will be ſpirited remonſtrances on account of another act of parliament, which obliges them to have two thirds white ſeamen. Mr. Eyle's Bermuda Sloop is ſeized in conſequence of being navigated by negroes—It will greatly affect the Bermudians who navigate altogether with negroes.

Calvert county, July 21, 1787.

On Saturday the 18th day of Auguſt, will be offered for ſale at the ſubſcriber's houſe, for cash, or tobacco,

SUNDRY valuable negroes, viz. men, women, boys and girls.—Alſo ſome horſes, cattle and hogs, together with ſome houſehold furniture.——The ſubſcriber will alſo diſpoſe of at private ſale, (on three years credit) one hundred acres of good land, ſome negroes, and ſeveral valuable horſes.

Annapolis, July 24, 1787.

THE ſubſcribers obſerving that little attention was paid to a former advertiſement of theirs, and being anxious to pay what balances are againſt them, make this ſecond application to their cuſtomers for a ſettlement, which is expected will be complied with, and a diſcharge of their reſpective balances completed previous to, or by the firſt of September next. Thoſe who have favoured the ſubſcribers with their cuſtom, cannot but admit, that the articles they have dealt and do deal in, are cash articles, or cannot be procured but on a very ſhort credit; therefore they hope that this requeſt may be thought reaſonable, and that attention be paid to it, which will enable them to complete what they are deſirous of doing, diſcharging their balances, and carrying on their buſineſs in a manner more to their ſatisfaction, and probably to thoſe who honour them with their cuſtom.
